

The Open Letter Collective

The Honest Pursuit

Hello!

My name is Lauren, and I created The Open Letter Collective. Open letters are known for being vulnerable and relatable pieces of writing that can inspire and impact any reader. I am passionate about discovering authenticity in our ability to relate and communicate with each other.

Everyone has a special story to tell, advice to give, or encouragement to offer and my hope for this collaboration initiative is to gather our voices and champion each other to write with love and honesty.

When I began my writing journey, I wrote open letters to process an event, experience, or relationship with someone. These letters helped me navigate mixed feelings and remember the lessons learned. I love reading other people's open letters because their stories can sometimes be mine too, and that's how connection starts. Open letters can be anything the writer needs it to be.

Join me in sharing your story and your heart! You can share your open letter by using the hash tag #openlettercollective on social media or submit your open letter to thehonestpursuit@gmail.com to be featured on the blog. Share your open letters and tell your stories because there is never too much hope, encouragement, or honesty in this world.

Petit à Petit,
